QUARTERLY COMMENTARY

Performance

The March quarter saw continued strong performance from most growth asset markets, as traders bet on inflation continuing to fall and any near-term recessionary conditions to be mild. The anticipated path of US interest rates changed over the quarter, with markets pricing in significantly fewer cuts later in the year. While we typically would expect this to weigh on equity markets, it appeared to have little to no impact, as markets rose steadily over the period. Amidst the cheers of equity investors over robust economic data, fixed income investors faced a tougher March quarter as yields rose, resulting in negative performance from global government bonds, though this was offset by positive returns from the credit segment.

Over the quarter, the Fund produced a strong absolute return which was ahead of both the strategic benchmark and the peer average. Longer-term performance remains solid and in line with returns we have historically expected from this strategy. The largest contributors to absolute performance were allocations to international shares as well as Australian shares.

Portfolio management

At quarter end, the Fund's asset allocation can be summarised as:

Australian shares – We expect Australian equities to generate a solid return premium versus risk-free assets over the medium to long-term, bolstered by franking credits and a healthy earnings yield. The sector makeup, which is dominated by banks and mining, is not as attractive to us as some offshore markets. The current positioning in this asset class is neutral vs the benchmark.

International shares – We believe global share markets particularly are well positioned for growth over the medium to long-term. We are expecting higher volatility moving forward, and thus we anticipate our active managers will have considerable opportunity to add value. We are currently overweight this asset class vs the benchmark.

Real assets – The different return drivers for real assets versus listed equities provide useful diversification and improved consistency of returns. Our current positioning in this asset class is neutral vs the benchmark.

Outlook

Looking ahead, we anticipate 2024 to be a broadly positive year for markets, helped by relatively lower inflation and central banks looking to cut rates where possible. However, with economic growth now struggling in many regions outside the US and an unstable global geopolitical environment, we believe it may be a rougher and more constrained ride than in 2023; particularly given significant recent price rises in growth asset markets. As always, we remain highly diversified across asset classes and strategies, as we focus on generating long-term wealth for our investors.

Manager in focus

Lazard

Australian Equities manager, Lazard, adopt a fundamental, high conviction approach to investing, targeting absolute returns over the long-term. Stock selection is founded on deep fundamental research. Risks, including from a benchmark-perspective, also form a significant consideration in building their portfolio. Lazard also believe ESG considerations can affect a security's valuation and financial performance, thus have integrated ESG into their research approach and investment decision process.

Stock story

Underweight to banks

For some time, Lazard has been materially reducing their exposure to banks, in both absolute and relative terms. While the shares have been rising in price for some time, Lazard believe there are significant headwinds in the industry the market is not pricing in. Net Interest Margins, an important indicator of bank profitability, have continued to decline. When combined with the cost of credit still being priced for an economic boom, along with bank stocks now trading at very high multiples, they've elected to mitigate risk by preferring other sectors with better cashflow prospects, such as general insurance, or stocks exposed to the energy transition.
